

Edgar Poe

Edgar Allan Poe.

Poe has an of the world a view such as a man with senses perturbed, buoyant. As space is to the opium eater, so is the world to him. To the opium-slave the space is at enlarged, expanded beyond the illimitable, by the addition of an inner exterior, a kind of soul to it, there is a sensation of infinity in everything.

(Quote Baudelaire And a pain {...})

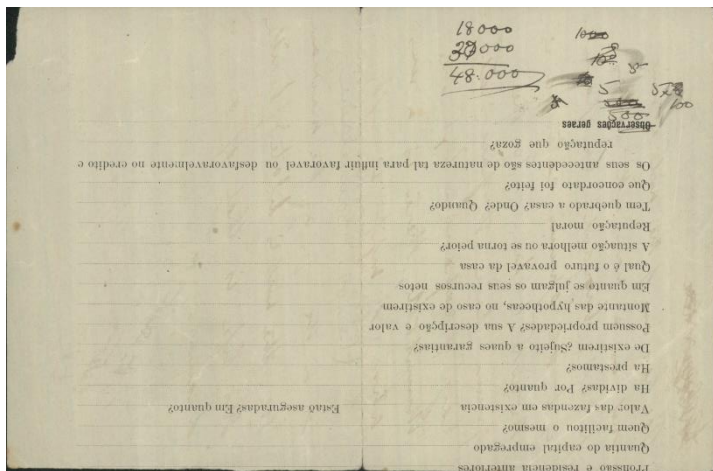

So to the eyes of the madman Poe the world is dilated, horrible. His life is that of a dreamer; {...}
