

Chesterton's Catholicism.

We believe naturally the contrary of what we are. Atheists tend and materialists tend to be humanitarians, though they should by rights be epicurists of the extreme hedonist type. If we die like the beasts, there is no more law because there is no value. If there be no God, there can be no moral law. But the {...}

Chesterton is naturally a Catholic because he is naturally the contrary.

This balance, ~~is obtained~~ strive for which we naturally strive; because that is happiness, is obtained in us.
