

Rondeau

I swore my love {...}

I swore my love should never pall
For her, the one entrancing she,
I promised marriage, I recall,
And said none was more dear to me.

Till from the Law there came a call
To mind me of what in times of glee,
I swore.

Transcrição

My chief mania was a morbid propensity to search for the cause of things; I saw in all things cause and effect; lotteries, raffles occupied me long in striving to find out their causality. I would reason at everything and with everything.
