

If you had told Shakespeare's Kinsmen: this is Shakespeare the great genius, they would have cried in laughter: "Genius? No, that is hilarious."

Nabo's speech.

In my opinion the best orator is he who speaks best.... He who speaks best is he whose words, whose ~~acts~~ gestures, also whose speech is the best possible in /adapted to\ the spit.

"The world, sir, ~~prod~~ consumes less wine than it produces"

"Well," replied the Dr. "it is not my fault."

By-the-by, did it even consumes more than it produced? Yes, sir, it did. But this ever did this.

If the ~~vin~~ vice regarding wine be drinking in excess, the Dr. had that vice; but if it be getting drunk, if by "drinking in excess", "getting drunk" ~~is~~ be implied, then must surely the Dr. had not this vice, and, in that case, no vice at all.
