Documents of Mental Decadence.

Delirium

Mania Of Doubt.

All things unto me are queries
That from normalness depart,
And their ceaseless asking wearies
My heart.

Things are and seem, and nothing bears
The secret of the life it wears.

All things' presence e'er is asking
Questions of disturbing pain
With dreadful hesitation tasking
My brain

How false is truth? How much doth seem
Since dreams are all and all's a dream.

Before mystery my will faileth
Torn with war within the mind,
And Reason like a coward quailleth
To find

More than themselves all things reveal
Yet that they with themselves conceal.
