

Theory of Perception.

† Let us consider, say, my perception of a table, and let us attempt to find what is the process of my thought in the perception. We find these to be the action of our mind:

Previously, I know what a table is; this idea is in me, rooted. When I see ~~an~~ this thing before me, my conception of a table passes out of me into the object, which is similar, of a generality, to it. My thought returns to me bearing with itself ~~the~~ ~~conce~~ a particularized idea of a table - the table that I see before me. Thus thought, after passing through the ~~eat~~ ~~other~~ object binds object to itself, as a particularization of thought.

C. R. Anon.

DIREITOS ASSOCIADOS

O trabalho MODERNISMO - Arquivo Virtual da Geração de Orpheu de <https://modernismo.pt/> está licenciado com uma Licença Creative Commons - Atribuição-NãoComercial-CompartilhaIgual 4.0 Internacional.